Robin Williams Moves to the Upper West Side

Saturday, February 19th, 2011

The Upper West Side's Rushmore (64th and Riverside) is getting some major celebrity attention this week. Yesterday, we reported that A-Rod purchased a $6 million condo in the building. Now, it looks like Robin Williams will be his neighbor. The New York Post reports that Robin Williams is moving into the building. The comedian, who is making his Broadway debut in Bengal Tiger at the Baghdad Zoo, is renting a luxury condo in the Rushmore while he stays in New York. Williams' new apartment, a four-bedroom, 2,489-square-foot home in the 41-story building, is reportedly priced at $15,000 per month, after originally being listed for sale at $4 million. The development has many luxurious details and is packed with amenities like a fitness center, pool, sundeck, garden atrium, and a screening room.
